

Jason is a qualified PGA professional with with 15 years of experience. Throughout his career he has taught every aspect of the game to player of all abilities, however his real passion lies in coaching the art and science of putting.

Jason knows that understanding the needs and objectives of each individual player is an essential part of great coaching and all relevant factors need to be considered to produce an effective course of action for success.

Jason believes that in order to reach optimal performance on a consistent basis, players must be knowledgeable about why they are skilful. In Jason's opinion, regardless of ability, every player must have great understanding of how they perform.

In order to improve his coaching capabilities, Jason has invested a great deal of time and effort in gaining further knowledge and understanding of how human beings function with both brain and body. Exploration of vairious subjects such as neurology, optometry and physiology have thus far revealed some very interesting insights which are currently implemented in his teachings. Jason believes that this deeper understanding of how we as humans best perform the skills associated with putting, will enable him to help all golfers regardless of the requirements for improvement. Jason's enthusiasm, thirst for knowledge and personal desire to become a great putting coach sees his quest ongoing for the foreseeable future.

Jason has enjoyed working with players and squads of various ages and abilities, from aspiring professionals to club golfers and looks forward to guiding you to better performance on the putting green.

